About Me

A passionate Computer Science and Engineering student dedicated to full-stack development and building impactful, real-world applications. My focus lies in designing secure, scalable, and user-centric software solutions that solve meaningful industry challenges. I thrive on integrating modern technologies, authentication systems, and modular architecture to enhance reliability and trust. With every project, I aim to bridge the gap between technical innovation and practical utility, crafting applications that not only function flawlessly but also empower users and businesses alike.
